1. Welcome and Opening Remarks

Margaret McCulloch (MMc) welcomed the group and highlighted the good turnout.

Office bearers have been re-elected and are as follows:

Convener - Margaret McCulloch MSP

Deputy Convener - Chic Brodie MSP, Phil Prentice, Scotland's Towns Partnership.

Last year the CPG on Towns and Towns Centres looked at the following themes:

- Community Led Towns
- Ministerial visit and Understanding Scottish Places
- Helping People Make Great Places
- Small Businesses in Towns

MMc recently announced her new role as Shadow Minister for Town Centres. The Town Centre Action Plan will now be a standing item on the Agenda with Phil Prentice, STP Chief Officer, providing an update at each meeting of the CPG.

The next meeting will be held on 13th May and will look at footfall and spend in town centres. The CPG will also launch a campaign to encourage MSP's to take a day out to work and spend time in their own town/area. In November, the CPG will hold a reception in Parliament to showcase small and rural towns, given that it is the year of food and drink, representatives will be encouraged to take a stall to promote what they do along with presenting local goods from their area.

2. Minutes of Previous Meeting and Matters Arising

The minutes were approved by Alistair Mitchell (AM) and seconded by Jim Metcalfe (JM).

Presentations, Papers and future dates can be found on the Scotland's Towns Partnership website, www.scotlandstowns.org

3. Supporting Small Businesses in our Towns

Barry McCulloch (BMc) Senior Policy Officer, FSB Scotland and Norrie Stewart (NS) Reatiler and Clarkston BID Project Manager looked at the role of small businesses in towns.

3.1 BMC has been working with town centres for eight years and thinks that they have not made enough progress. We haven't yet answered the question: why do town centres matter economically? The FSB exists to represent it's members by taking their views and lobbying on their behalf.

The bottom line is that towns need a concerted drive to push costs down for SMEs because it's too expensive. Independent businesses account for 88% of local retailing and they are important to our town centres.

Rate and rents are vast, complex and primitive – it would be useful to have a one stop shop for rates and regulations. The Small Business Bonus Scheme must continue.

How quickly can you start a business? Digital infrastructure and skills are important and in rural areas and there is often limited or no connectivity. We need to seek practical solutions to resolve this. Use empty buildings to amplify connectivity and better explore linkages with other areas. Build upon linkages that exist and stop leakages.

Base policies on uncertainty: 35% of jobs will be lost in the next two years, business base has changed for SME growth. Bricks and Mortar businesses are now relocating to homes. What does that mean for policy and the Town Centre Action Plan? What does the future of towns look like?

Town centres are too expensive for most FSB members to locate, half of all businesses are now homeworking to accommodate their lifestyle. Changing face of business is key to changing face of town centres.

3.2 Discussion

JM: Businesses look to be socially minded, given the trend of homeworking, is there a change in how business is conducted?

BMc: No, but there is simply a need for towns to accept any business, to encourage a mixed market and make it easier and cheaper for this to happen.

Sunil Varu (SV): How will the rates revaluation impact SMEs? Will it be an opportunity for them?

BMc Some businesses will benefit, some won't. Push the reform of rates but there will always be areas of high rental. The revaluation is critical but SMEs don't have the required knowledge.

CB: There is a tax reform meeting next week in Parliament. How can we marry social enterprise in towns centres?

BMc: Town centres can't be fussy – they have to be accepting of all enterprise.

3.3 Norrie Stewart, Retailer and Clarkston BID Project Manager

How can we help SMEs thrive in towns? Multi retailers and out of town parks must be stopped. Non Domestic Rates are the assassins of the high street whilst councils look at mid to long term funding, SMEs have much shorter cycles. The Small Business Bonus Scheme must continue, particularly for SMEs.

Town centres are unique and localism will help businesses solve problems. Ambassadors and town centre champions will also support this. All stakeholders must be helped to accept change, most have lost the local post office, fish mongers, convenience shop and these have been replaced with shelves in mini supermarkets. The character and personality of our town centres has suffered and is shifting to a marketplace that provides public and private services, businesses need to adapt to the evolution of our high streets.

3.4 Discussion

Gordon Bell (GB): There is fragility amongst independent SMEs who often rely on a second income to sustain them. Now supporting 95 independent retailers across Scotland, The Retailer carried out survey and found that around 65% of independent businesses rely on another job or spouse with a higher income.

Craig McLaren (CMc): Barry and Norrie talked about disconnect between SMEs and their town centres. We need to look at connection between spatial and community planning to overcome this. RTPi will publish a report next month on place based community planning.

BMc: Community Planning as it is today is not about the community and it is not spoken about enough which results in priorities being different to reality.

4. Town Centre Action Plan Update

4.1 See Appendix 1

4.2 Discussion

Malcolm Fraser (MF) congratulated the progress that STP is making and commended it's positivity.

MMc highlighted that collaborative working is key and thanked all involved.

BMc: How do we create a level playing field for SMEs and independent businesses?

Phil Prentice (PP): It's a new world, we need to embrace how SMEs can influence town centres. Try demonstration projects and move towards community empowerment. It is positive for collaboration and there is a good energy at present.

Tom Johnston (TJ): Discounters, home bargain retailers pose threat to our town centres.

PP: It is up to entrepreneurs and town centre businesses to capture growth. There is a resurgence of business, driven by affluence and poverty. Town Centre First Principle holds no consent for out of town – it should no longer be offered.

MMc reminded the group to invite MSP's to their towns to work and spend time in for a day and offered to go along to her own town centre. An invite template will be distributed in due course. STP Tea Party on 13th with Julian Dobson precedes the next CPG meeting.

MMc closed by stating that it was good to see new faces and encouraged them to return.

APPENDIX 1 – TOWN CENTRE ACTION PLAN UPDATE

Cross Party Group on Towns, 25th Feb 2015 – TCAP Progress Update

The TCAP is the cross party response to the national review of towns, it has an emphasis on people, enterprise and place and provides us with clear recommendations and a raft of potential approaches to ensure our towns are vibrant place.

It is clear that many of the solutions outlined in the Review and Action Plan were not intended for the Scottish Government to undertake directly but rather that this would stimulate an enabling framework to encourage actions from the wider public, private and community sector.

STP was established to become the national “GO TO” body for towns and to build such partnerships and collaborations and I’m pleased to announce that our new national towns portal is almost complete and that very shortly we will have a central repository for toolkits, policy, research and practical advice as well as showcasing good news and best practice.

Theme	Activity and Progress
Town Centre First Principle/ Proactive Planning	The Scottish Government Cabinet and COSLA Leaders agreed the Town Centre First Principle in July 2014 and we have seen some great examples such as Falkirk, East Renfrewshire, East Ayrshire and West Dunbartonshire. STP in collaboration with RTPI, SURF and HOPS have agreed to run a national Scotland’s Best Town (S,M,L) competition to underpin the importance of principle and to celebrate and to showcase and learn from the towns that embrace it. STP, RTPI and Iain Scott also plan to roll out some entrepreneurial planning events in the near future to further embed the principle. Discussions are also underway between STP and SG to see if a couple of demonstration towns can be identified where the TCFP can be the main plank or driver of a wider town economic regeneration plan for the town Scottish Towns Centre MasterPlanning Toolkit to go live on STP Portal in April
