Privacy Notice – Scotland’s Women Stand Event – Digital Storytelling

This privacy notice explains how the Scottish Parliamentary Corporate Body will collect and use personal data provided to it through digital storytelling.

Purpose of processing

One way in which the Scottish Parliament invites people to share their experiences with the Parliament is by facilitating the creation of digital stories, using pictures and audio voiceover.

The Parliament uses digital storytelling to engage with members of the public, to promote such engagement opportunities or to give us information about what subjects are relevant to citizens and how the Scottish Parliament has influenced life and society in Scotland.

At this event you can participate in an audio recording of your story/experience which may be used for the purposes of compiling a digital story. Digital stories will be compiled from a range of individual recordings on the day and images will be added to create a clip. We will not include your name or photo with the audio recording.

Digital stories may be shared on the Scottish Parliament’s website, on displays within the Scottish Parliament building or on the Scottish Parliament’s social media channels.

The recordings may also be transferred to be held permanently by the National Records of Scotland (NRS) as part of the historical archive of the Scottish Parliament’s activities.

Collecting and holding Personal Data

The Scottish Parliamentary Corporate Body (the SPCB) is the data controller for the digital stories and processes any personal data you provide under the requirements of the General Data Protection Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (GDPR) and the Data Protection Act 2018 (DPA).

Personal data consists of data that relates to an identified or identifiable living individual.

The SPCB will hold any personal data securely, will use it only for the purposes it was collected for and will only pass it to any third parties if there is an appropriate legal basis such as in compliance with a legal obligation. Further information about the data protection legislation and your rights is available here:

https://ico.org.uk/for-the-public/is-my-information-being-handled-correctly/

Source of the information

Information is provided directly by individuals themselves who are participating in the Digital Storytelling activity at the Scotland’s Women Stand Event.
Categories of information

If you participate in the digital storytelling activity at Scotland’s Women Stand Event, we will record standard or “normal category” data about you such as your name, address and contact information and your story.

If you give us your email address, this may be personal data as well if it contains your name or other identifying information.

Any views and opinions that you express during the audio recording are also your personal data under Data Protection legislation.

Depending on the information you decide to share for the purposes of digital storytelling, the information may also be considered “special category” personal data (which used to be referred to as “sensitive” personal data.) For example, this could include details about race or ethnic origin, political or religious views, sex life or sexual orientation, trade union membership, physical or mental health or any criminal offences.

The legal basis for processing

Data protection law states that we must have a legal basis for handling your personal data. The legal basis for collecting, holding and publishing your personal data you give us through digital storytelling is that the processing is necessary for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest or substantial public interest.

Because we are using the information to engage with members of the public about the work of the Scottish Parliament, the task is to facilitate democratic engagement, which is a public interest task in accordance with Art 6(1)(d) GDPR, section 8(e)DPA.

If you share any special category personal data in your digital story, the legal basis for processing this information is that it was made public by the data subject themselves in accordance with Art 9(2)(e) GDPR.

Please note that the legal basis for the processing of the information in the way described above is not your consent.

You are free to decide if you would like to take part in this event activity. If you choose to share your information with us in this way, we will be able to hold and use the information based on the legal basis above.

This means you cannot withdraw your consent at a later stage.

We will however, as a courtesy, give you the opportunity to withdraw your story from further use by us after the recording is complete, in which case we will delete all information we hold in relation to your digital story.
For the transfer of data to the National Records of Scotland, the legal basis is that it is necessary for archiving purposes in the public interest (Art 6(1)(e) GDPR, section 8(d)Art DPA or Art 9(2)(j) GDPR, section 10(1)(e) DPA).

If you want to share information that identifies a third party (for example by mentioning their name), please ensure you have permission from these individuals to do so. We recommend that you share this privacy notice with the third-party individuals to ensure they are fully informed.

Retention and sharing of personal data

Digital stories which are used on social media or for the purpose of promoting the Parliament’s work on the Parliament’s website will be handled in line with our privacy notice on social media.

Much of the information created by the Scottish Parliament is eventually transferred to National Records of Scotland for permanent historic preservation. This may include your digital story.

For the transfer of data to the National Records of Scotland, the legal basis is that it is necessary for archiving purposes in the public interest (Art 6(1)(e) GDPR, section 8(d)Art Data Protection Act 2018.)

Your contact details will be held securely until the end of the piece of work and then deleted, unless you have given us your consent to receive future updates on opportunities to become involved in Parliamentary work.

Your rights

Data protection legislation sets out the rights which individuals have in relation to personal data held about them by data controllers.

For example, the rights allowing for erasure of personal data (right to be forgotten) and data portability do not apply in cases where personal data is processed for the purposes of the performance of a task carried out in the public interest. The right to object to the processing of personal data for the purposes of a public interest task is restricted if there are legitimate grounds for the processing which override the interest of the data subject.

This would be considered on a case by case basis and depends on what personal data is involved and the risks further processing of that data would pose to you. The following rights do apply:

Access to your information – You have the right to request a copy of the personal information about you that we hold.

Correcting your information – You may ask us to correct any personal information about you that you believe is incorrect.

Objecting to how we may use your information – Where we use your personal information to perform tasks carried out in the public interest, then, if you ask us to, we will stop using that personal information unless there are overriding legitimate grounds to continue.
Restricting how we may use your information – in some cases, you may ask us to restrict how we use your personal information. This right might apply, for example, where we are checking the accuracy of personal information about you that we hold or assessing the validity of any objection you have made to our use of your information. The right might also apply where this is no longer a basis for using your personal information, but you don’t want us to delete the data. Where this right is validly exercised, we may only use the relevant personal information with your consent, for legal claims or where there are other public interest grounds to do so.

Please contact us in any of the ways set out in the Contact information and further advice section if you wish to exercise any of these rights.
