

Privacy Notice – Submitting your views to a Committee

Purposes of the processing

Your views and expertise are essential to the working of the Scottish Parliament Committees. When you provide information to a Committee in the form of a submission the Parliament will use this as evidence to help it make decisions and recommendations on the performance of the Scottish Government or other areas of interest within the Committee's remit.

Collecting and holding Personal Data

The Scottish Parliamentary Corporate Body (the SPCB) processes any personal data you send to it under the requirements of the General Data Protection Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (the GDPR) and the Data Protection Act 2018 (the DPA).

Personal data consists of data from which a living individual may be identified. The SPCB will hold any personal data securely, will use it only for the purposes it was collected for and will only pass it to any third parties with your consent or according to a legal obligation. Further information about the data protection legislation and your rights is available here:

Information Commissioner's Office - is my information being handled correctly?

The Code of Conduct places further obligations on all Members of Parliament in terms of how they handle material containing personal data in the course of their Committee work. The Code of Conduct can be found here. The relevant section is Section 7: MSPs general conduct.

Categories of information

If you submit evidence to a Committee the Scottish Parliament will need your contact information to process your submission. This will usually take the form of a name, email address and contact telephone number. Occasionally this may include a mailing address if we receive information by hard copy. This is considered "standard" personal data.

Depending on what views and experiences you have decided to share, the content of your submission may be considered "sensitive" or "special category" personal data. For example, this could include details about race or ethnic origin, political or religious views, sex life or sexual orientation, trade union membership, physical or mental health, genetic or biometric data or any criminal offences.

The legal basis for processing

Data protection law states that we must have a legal basis for handling your personal data. The legal basis for collecting, holding, sharing and publishing your personal data is that the processing is necessary for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest or substantial public interest, in accordance with Art 6(1)(e) GDPR, s8(d) DPA and, for special category data, Art 9(2)(g) GDPR and section 10(3) and paragraph 6(2)(b) of Schedule 1 of the DPA. The task is to facilitate evidence gathering for a parliamentary Committee which is part of the core function of the SPCB and therefore a Crown function in accordance with section 8(d) DPB.

This means that if you decide to provide us with any personal data in the form of a submission, we have a legal basis to use and publish that information and do not require your consent to do so. However, as a matter of good practice, we will ask you to confirm that you have read this Privacy Notice and understand the consequences of providing any such information to us.

If the person submitting evidence is under the age of 13 then we will ask the young person's parent or guardian to confirm that they are happy for the young person to provide their written evidence to us.

In certain circumstances Scottish Parliament Committees have the statutory power to be able to require people to provide documentation or attend to give evidence. If a formal notice is issued under these powers it is a criminal offence not to comply.

Publishing your views

One of the founding principles of the Scottish Parliament is transparency and openness. It is standard practice for the Committee to publish your submission on the Committee's webpage on the Scottish Parliament website. Once the submissions are publicly available, the Committee may also discuss them in meetings or use them to demonstrate a point of view in written reports. Contact details (e.g. your e-mail address) provided alongside your response will not be published, but may be used by the Parliament to contact you about your response or to provide you with further information about the Committee work you are interested in.

The Committee may, on occasion, accept submissions in a non-standard format. The main way to do this is to send in your views anonymously - the same process will apply but your name, contact details and any identifying information from the content will be removed before it goes online. Any quote from or reference to any of your answers or comments will not be attributed to you by name.

The other is to send in your views as a 'confidential' (not for publication) response. They will not be published online or referenced in any Committee report and will only be seen by relevant SPCB staff, the Committee Members and possibly staff from Committee Member's offices. The final decision on whether your views will be accepted either anonymously or as a 'not for publication response' is for the Committee to take. If the Committee turns down your request for your submission to be processed in a non-standard way you can choose to withdraw your submission at that stage.

Times when we may not publish your views

There may be a few situations where we may choose not to publish your evidence or have to edit it before publication for practical or legal reasons. For example, when we have received an extremely large quantity of submissions or where we receive a group of submissions which say similar or the same things. In that case, we would normally publish only a list of the names of people who have sent in their views.

Alternatively, we may have to edit information if it can identify another living person who has not specifically given their agreement to have information about them made public. In these situations, Committee Members may have access to the full content of your submission, even if it has not been published in full.

The Scottish Parliament will not publish defamatory statements or material in evidence submissions. This means that if you send in views about a particular person that may be considered harmful and untrue we will return them to you with an invitation to substantiate the comments, remove or redact them. In these circumstances, if the evidence is returned to us and it still contains material which we consider may be defamatory, it may not be considered by the Committee and will be deleted from our systems.

Use of digital tools

Smart Survey

The Scottish Parliament is licenced to use Smart Survey which is a third party online survey system enabling the Scottish Parliament to collect and analyse written evidence submissions. Smart Survey is based in the UK and is subject to the requirements of data protection legislation. The privacy policy for Smart Survey is available here:

Smart Survey Privacy Policy

Dialogue

The Scottish Parliament is also licenced to use Dialogue, which is a third party digital consultation tool enabling the Scottish Parliament to collect and analyse ideas and discussion relating to addressing a specific 'challenge', for instance a Bill or inquiry.

Delib, who offer Dialogue, is based between Australia and the UK and is subject to the requirements of data protection legislation. The privacy policy for Dialogue is available here.

There is also a separate privacy notice for Dialogue on the Scottish Parliament website.

Retention and sharing of personal data

The content of your submission will form part of the public record and will help create the evidence base upon which Members of the Scottish Parliament make decisions. Standard and anonymous submissions will appear on the website. They will be transferred to the National Records of Scotland and will continue to be publicly searchable on an ongoing basis. For the transfer of data to the National Records of Scotland, the legal basis is that it is necessary for archiving purposes in the public interest (Art 6(1)(e) GDPR, section 8(d) DPA or, for special category data, Art 9(2)(j) GDPR, and section 10(2) and paragraph 4 of Schedule 1 of the DPA).

Your name and contact details may be added to our Committee Office contact list in order to be kept informed of the outcome of the Committee Business you contributed to. Your information will be stored on secure Parliament servers and will only be accessible by Scottish Parliament staff. If you wish to be removed from the contact list, please contact the relevant Committee clerk who will arrange for your details to be deleted from the list. A separate Privacy Notice is available for the Committee Office Contact list: this provides further information about the processing of personal data for the purposes of creating and maintaining the list.

If a digital engagement tool is used, all data collected using the tool will be transferred to Scottish Parliament servers. These servers can only be accessed by Parliament staff. The same process set out above will then apply.

Possible media interest

Individuals and organisation who submit evidence may also receive requests to participate in media/broadcast interviews. If this happens you will be provided with the journalist's contact details and it will be up to you to decide whether you wish to contact them and agree to participate.

If you decide to do a media interview or be part of a case study, contact with the journalist can be facilitated by a SPCB media relations officer. Once the interview/broadcast has been completed and the Committee's work concluded, your contact details will be securely deleted from the SPCB's servers (unless you wish to be included in the contact list). If the occasion arises where the journalist requests your contact details they will only be provided with your consent.

Any case study or media interview that you undertake will be publicly available on the relevant media or broadcast outlet indefinitely.

Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002

The Parliament is covered by the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002. This affects the way that we deal with your evidence. In particular you should be aware that if we receive a request for information under the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002, we may be required legally to release the information to the person who has made the request – even where the relevant committee has agreed to treat all or part of the information in confidence or publish it anonymously.

With this in mind, while we can assure you that your submission or name will not be circulated to the general public in the context of the relevant committee's current work, we are unable to give you an absolute guarantee that the full submission will never be released in response to an FOI request.

Your rights

The GDPR sets out the rights which individuals have in relation to personal information held about them by data controllers. These rights are listed below, although whether you will be able to exercise each of these rights in a particular case may depend on the purpose for which the data controller is processing the data and the legal basis upon which the processing takes place.

Access to your information – You have the right to request a copy of the personal information about you that we hold. For further information, see our Data Subjects' Access Requests Policy.

Correcting your information – We want to make sure that your personal information is accurate, complete and up to date and you may ask us to correct any personal information about you that you believe does not meet these standards.

Deletion of your information – Unless the processing continues to be necessary for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest, you have the right to ask us to delete personal information about you where:

- You consider that we no longer require the information for the purposes for which it was obtained
- You have validly objected to our use of your personal information – see Objecting to how we may use your information below
- Our use of your personal information is contrary to law or our other legal obligations.

Objecting to how we may use your information –Where we use your personal information to perform tasks carried out in the public interest then, if you ask us to, we will stop using that personal information unless there are overriding legitimate grounds to continue.

Restricting how we may use your information – in some cases, you may ask us to restrict how we use your personal information. This right might apply, for example, where we are checking the accuracy of personal information about you that we hold or assessing the validity of any objection you have made to our use of your information. The right might also apply where this is no longer a basis for using your personal information but you don't want us to delete the data. Where this right is validly exercised, we may only use the relevant personal information with your consent, for legal claims or where there are other public interest grounds to do so.

Please contact us in any of the ways set out in the Contact information and further advice section if you wish to exercise any of these rights.

Changes to our privacy statement

We keep this privacy statement under regular review and will place any updates on this website. Paper copies of the privacy statement may also be obtained using the contact information below.

This privacy statement was last updated on 17 September 2018.
